

Group-Led Scavenger-Hunt

Introduction: The University of New Mexico welcomes visits from younger students in grades K – 8th; promoting the importance of education at an early age is a mission we strive to support. However, our traditional 50-minute walking tour often is too lengthy and the information too in-depth to complement younger students' needs and interests.

Program: We have created a fun new Junior Lobo Scavenger Hunt for K-8th grade groups that would like to visit UNM. The scavenger hunt is designed to be led by an in-group adult chaperone, and the students divided into groups not bigger than 8-10 students each. The hunt covers the center-most areas of campus, with emphasis on areas of interest to younger visitors (Duck Pond, Bookstore, Popejoy, etc), and takes approximately 30 minutes to complete, depending on the age and pace of the group. An answer sheet is provided to help guide the adult chaperone.

Result: The Scavenger Hunt setup is more interactive than the traditional campus tour, and because it is self-led, can be personalized according to the specific interests and physical capabilities of each group. We want our Junior Lobos to leave with an impression of college as a fun, engaging, and interesting place of learning, so that when they return for a traditional recruitment-led campus tour in high school, they will be ready to receive more in-depth information.
